

A Letter from TLC's Chairperson

Fiscal year 2013 (July 1, 2012 – June 30, 2013) was a simultaneously memorable, tumultuous, and transformational time for Triangle Land Conservancy. The memorable part was that FY2013 marked the 30th anniversary of TLC – thirty highly successful years for conservation as indicated by the nearly 16,000 acres that were protected, the opening of 7 public nature preserves, the hundreds of nature walks and events that connected people with nature, and our work in partnerships with others in the region to safeguard our precious drinking water. Ours is a legacy of which we can all be very proud.

We also witnessed enormous changes in the organization over the 2013 fiscal year. TLC's president, Kevin Brice, resigned in the spring of 2012. Kevin had been with TLC as both a volunteer and a staff member for roughly 2/3 of its existence, so his departure meant a major loss of leadership and institutional memory. Following his resignation, the board of directors was fortunate to have obtained the temporary services of veteran non-profit executive Tom McGuire. Tom did a splendid job of managing TLC for several months in the interim while a search committee for a new executive director was at work.

I had the privilege of chairing the search committee, which was composed of board members Bill Holman and Joan Siefert Rose, and former TLC board chairs Liz Rooks and John McAdams. We received over 70 applications and, from these, identified several outstanding candidates. Any one of the finalists could have capably managed TLC, but one person – Chad Jemison – stood out as a person with vision, energy, and an ability to thrust TLC into the top ranks of land trusts nationally. The Board unanimously voted to offer him the position, and we were delighted when he accepted. Chad began his new duties in October 2012.

He plunged into his work with gusto – working with the staff, learning about TLC and its properties, meeting members and donors, working on a new business model to fund the organization, and all the other duties expected of an executive director. During this whirlwind period, we unfortunately lost several experienced and dedicated staff members. The board is grateful for their steadfast commitment to TLC's mission during their tenure. Momentum is naturally slowed for a time when so many people with key skills and institutional memory depart. This was, by definition, a tumultuous time for TLC.

But the good news is that it was also a transformational time. Because of dramatic reductions in funds available for conservation, it has been clear for some time that the formula for past successes was no longer operative. Chad and the board recognized that the most important immediate task was to fill each open position with persons who had the requisite skills as well as a high level of energy and enthusiasm for the new directions needed to take TLC effectively into its fourth decade and beyond. Largely through Chad's efforts, TLC was able to attract an outstanding, highly skilled team of professionals. Even though the recruiting was done nationally, most positions were able to be filled with people living in the Triangle area. This has helped significantly in allowing the new staff to get up and running with minimal down time. None of the new hires took office until July in fiscal year 2014, but the naming of the new team was truly transformational for TLC. I am anxious to have all TLC members meet them. I know you will be impressed.

In spite of the many changes, the conservation staff of TLC – Leigh Ann Hammerbacher, Bo Howes, and Walt Tysinger – continued to pursue aggressively our mission of protecting important conservation lands in the Triangle. In the course of 12 months, this team conserved roughly 150 acres of wildlife habitat and working lands, 10,000 feet of streamside buffers, developed 14 forest stewardship plans with landowners, and planted nearly 2,000 trees at our White Pines Nature Preserve.

One of our greatest achievements in FY2013 was the opening of our seventh nature preserve. In October, 2012, TLC held a ribbon cutting ceremony at Horton Grove Nature Preserve, just north of Durham. About 500 people attended the event. Horton Grove has already become one of our more popular preserves.

All of our conservation efforts relate directly to four targeted public benefits: safeguarding our drinking water, protecting wildlife habitat, supporting local farms and food, and connecting people with nature. As a regional land trust, we have come to realize over our thirty-year history that our conservation work is deeply rooted in protecting land for these key benefits rather than protecting it from something.

I am convinced that, by building on the successes of our first 30 years, we now have the organization and the people in place to increase dramatically our presence in the Triangle and to propel Triangle Land Conservancy into the top ranks of effective land conservation organizations nationally. All of us who live, work, and play in our six-county area will be the beneficiaries.

Most importantly, all of us on the Board and the staff greatly appreciate the financial and volunteer contributions of our members in making TLC's past and anticipated future successes possible. Thank you for your interest in, and support of, Triangle Land Conservancy.

SUPPORTING LOCAL FARMS AND FOOD

Well-managed farms and associated woodlands enhance our communities by producing food, wood products, and other crops; by sustaining rural agricultural economies; and by providing clean water, wildlife habitat, scenic vistas, and educational opportunities. Local farms also supply fresh food to local markets. Farms and their heritage are vanishing from our landscape; once gone, they are unlikely to return. We are losing our farmland and forests at an unprecedented rate – 100,000 acres of North Carolina farmland in 2010/2011 alone. It is more important than ever to conserve land.

PROTECTING WILDLIFE HABITAT

Natural areas and well-managed forests support healthy ecosystems and balance our built environment by providing habitat for native plants and animals. This habitat supports opportunities for research and education that reveal how human activities change the natural world that we depend on for food, air, water, and our very lives. Just over 100 years ago, 80% of North Carolinians lived in rural environments and 20% in urban. Today, those numbers are reversed. As many as 1.3 million people are expected to move into our region over the next three decades. The time to save important lands is now, before they are gone forever.

SAFEGUARDING DRINKING WATER SUPPLY

Abundant clean water is essential. People drink water, eat fish that grow in it, and use it for agriculture, industry, and recreation. Clean water is also an essential component of habitat for native plants and animals. Population growth in our community increases demand for clean water – we use more than ever before – while associated pollution has compromised the supply.

CONNECTING PEOPLE WITH NATURE

Connecting people with nature is essential as we look to balance our increasingly indoor, urban lives. Opportunities for outdoor exercise and recreation, fresh air and contemplation support our physical and mental health. TLC offers a variety of ways to connect with nature. On average children spend seven hours connected to a technological device, as childhood obesity continues to skyrocket. Replacing one of those hours with outdoor activities – like running through our nature preserves – improves the mental and physical health of parent and child alike.

Visit us at www.triangleland.org and see how you can get involved, volunteer, give, and help grow the community that we all enjoy.

2012 - 13 ANNUAL REPORT

We are excited to share with you - our dedicated members and supporters - the tremendous accomplishments we've made in 2012/2013. With your help, we have safeguarded clean water, protected wildlife habitat, supported our local ag community, and connected people with nature. To showcase how relevant your support is to our community, we have created an interactive website and produced five poignant mini-documentaries. We hope you will find this new format engaging and enlightening. We couldn't have done it without you! Thank you!

TLC receives contributions and government support for the purchase of conservation lands and easements. This restricted revenue is not available for TLC Operations.

TLC's responsibility for conserved land does not end when it acquires that land, in fact, it is just the beginning. TLC is responsible for stewarding and managing its land and easements to ensure their conservation values are protected in perpetuity. TLC's endowment funds provide the long-term support for the stewardship of its conservation land and easements.

[1] Funds held at community foundations are considered "agency funds" and are not reflected on TLC's balance sheet as an asset.

Financial Review 2012 - 2013

Being fiscally responsible goes hand-in-hand with our environmental conservation efforts. Being good stewards of green spaces and working lands is how we give back and show our appreciation for our community's generosity.

NOTE: The financial results shown here are derived from Triangle Land Conservancy's audited financial statements for the years ended June 30, 2012 and 2013, which contain an unqualified audit opinion. The complete audited financial statements for TLC can be found on triangleland.org.

We are grateful for everyone who gives time, land and money to support TLC. The following list recognizes contributions made during the last fiscal year (July 1, 2012 to June 30,2013). The list includes donors of restricted gifts and members who give unrestricted support. It does not include payments on pledges made and recognized in previous fiscal years. We have worked hard to ensure that names and gift levels are correct, but please contact the development office if you find an error or have a question or comment: 919-908-0051 or ament@triangleland.org. (Please note that TLC appreciates gifts made through workplace giving campaigns. Please let us know if you are giving this way so that we can thank you!)
